1. Thank you for the fine response to my queries about the Center's past, present and potential applications of ADP.

2. I am beginning to understand why I have not yet been briefed on the MIS. I must point out, however, that H. Stoertz tells me that he finds the MIS most useful, and he has cited a couple of lovely cases to prove the point. Perhaps I can be brought into the MIS picture soon?

3. Clearly I need to know more about the problems in the WWIPIR -- ADP related and otherwise. AID and IEG will collaborate in briefing me on same, please.

4. While you talked about "Major" new applications, I asked for "new and additional uses" without distinguishing between major or minor. AID is responsible, in my view, for seeking out areas in the Center's activities -- no matter how small -- where ADP applications could be effective. For example, Steve, has AID been involved in the look you and Steve McC are taking at computer-assisted control of film cans?
